If you live in a Nevada city or town with fewer than 100,000 people, you do not want to miss tonight's "Money Watch Q and A" segment at 5. We will learn more about the Nevada Rural Housing Authority's "Home At Last" first-time home buyer program. It benefits those of you who have not owned a home within the past three years and veterans.

If you live in a rural area and are considered a first-time home buyer, you could be eligible for free cash to put towards a down payment on a home or a lower interest rate. These incentives are made possible by a multi-million dollar bond program through NRHA.

Our Money Watch Q & A guest tonight is Gary Longaker, the Executive Director of NRHA, which has helped hundreds of renters become homeowners in the past few years. Home At Last was created to provide affordable housing opportunities in rural areas of the state.

There are income limits, so to find out if you qualify, give Gary a call tonight at 858-2222. Lines are open from 5-6pm. Or contact the NRHA offices at (775) 887-1795.
